Compliments Our Superintendent

The Beattyville News says: "The Teachers Institute of Lee County was in session last week, with Prof. George W. Chapman Superintendent of the Paris City Schools, as the instructor. Every teacher in the county was in attendance and they were delighted with the strong, earnest, scholarly addresses made by Prof. Chapman. He is beyond doubt one of the ablest and most practical instructors in the State. He has the spirit of the true teacher and has the ability to infuse his spirit and enthusiasm into the teachers and make them feel their responsibility and appreciate their golden opportunities. Tuesday night Prof. Chapman delivered his lecture, 'The Development of Liberty,' which was both scholarly and eloquent."

Attempted Suicide.

Wm. Rose, colored, of Centerville, attempted suicide Friday by shooting himself in the breast with a .38 caliber revolver. Rose was to have been married on Thursday and after dressing for the wedding and going to the home of his bride-to-be, he found that his love had gone and married another fellow.

The boys were teasing him about it Friday morning and he went home and tried to end his life. The ball went through his lung and was taken out near the backbone by Dr. Arthur Keller, of this city.

Mrs. Lancaster Dies.

Mrs. Lula Lancaster, widow of the late J. W. Lancaster, of this city, died Friday afternoon, at her home in Lexington, from the result of injuries received at the same time her husband was accidentally killed. It will be remembered that they were thrown from a vehicle while out driving near Oil Springs, in Clark county.

Wheat! Wheat!

We want to buy your wheat at highest market price. You can save time if you sell to us in unloading. We unload 2,000 bushels per hour. If you do not care to sell now, we will store your wheat in our steel tanks and no insurance will be necessary. We buy at all stations in Bourbon and adjoining counties.

Parks' Hill Assembly.

The third annual meeting of the Parks' Hill Assembly is now in full blast at Parks Hill, in Nicholas. Capt. Jack Crawford, the Poet Scout, is the bill for to-night. A large crowd is in attendance and the very best lecturers and entertainers will be heard daily for ten days. There is a train that leaves the grounds every night at 9 o'clock. The usual special trains will be run to the grounds Sunday.

BIRTHS.

Born on yesterday to the wife of Chas. Steenbergen, of Mt. Airy Ave., a daughter.

Insured with W. O. Hinton. He has the right kind of insurance.

Attractions For the Fair.

In addition to Reckless Russell who will give daily two free performances in which he leaps from a rapidly moving bicycle from an elevated platform more than a hundred feet high, and alights in a pool of water, Chairman George Rassenfoss, of the amusement committee of the Bourbon County Agricultural Society, closed a contract with Messrs. Keppler & Chambers, aeronauts, of Brooksville, O., who will give free a daily balloon ascension and parachute leap. Chairman Rassenfoss is also negotiating for additional free attractions that will make a great drawing card during the fair.

Dog Poisoner at Work.

The dog poisoner was out Saturday night and distributed his poisonous buttons throughout the town. As is generally the case a number of valuable hunting dogs are dead, and the same number of worthless curs are roaming the streets. It is claimed by some that the dog poisoner goes so far as to throw the poison into yards. The person that does this should be found out and given the extreme penalty of the law. It is cruel, inhuman and in open violation of the law and steps should be taken to locate the person. Several dogs were killed Saturday night that never left their home only when they followed their masters and had on them when killed a tag showing tax had been paid on them.

Mr. J. M. Brennan, who lost his fine red Irish setter, "Elk," by an interurban car running over him several weeks ago, was unfortunate enough to have a mate to him killed by the poisoning route Saturday night.

Timothy Galvin Dead.

Mr. Timothy Galvin, Sr., formerly of this city, died at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. J. M. Kelley, at Lexington, Saturday afternoon aged 83 years. Mr. Galvin was the father of Mrs. J. M. Kelley, Mrs. J. P. O'Connor, of El Paso, Texas, and Mr. John J. Galvin, of Lexington. The burial will be in the family lot in the Catholic Cemetery in this city, this morning at 10 o'clock.

A Defense of Kentucky Beauties in Paris.

The Morning Telegraph of New York objects to the ungallant criticism of the French press on the beauty of the Courier-Journal delegation of popularity contest winners, and sizes up the Sunday editions in the following:

"The Gauewar of Baroda could not bring himself to admire the beauty of American girls, and frankly said so. He found them piquant, self-sufficient, full of enterprise, but not nearly so beautiful as the dark-skinned hours of his own jurisdiction.

"Now Paris adds its knock to the knock of the Goekwar. Thirty Kentucky girls sent over on an excursion to the French capital by Colonel Waterson's paper in Louisville have so far disappointed the Parisians that they are howling with decision at these types of 'American beauty.' The Parisian reporters have caught, by way of London, the American slang expression, 'Peach.' Are these the peaches? they are asking. Thank you, we prefer fruit of our own growing. 'Never,' says the ungallant L'Eclair, 'did feet so immense support so little beauty.'"

"Such extremity of expression, of course, defeats and confutes itself. Kentucky women are beautiful—when they are beautiful—and their feet are no larger and no smaller than the feet of other normal and well nourished persons of their sex. The French wits have been prepared by the comic newspapers of two continents to expect a consignment of transcendent beauty when they heard that Marse Henry was sending over thirty picked young women from the State of the Blue Grass.

"Of course they have been disappointed. The young women were picked, not for their beauty, but for their popularity, in Louisville. They may or may not be good looking. But even if they were peerless Venuses, every one, Paris would have been disappointed, as a matter of loyalty to the home product.

"If the Parisian journalists are course and ungallant in their manner of recording their disappointment, that is because they are not educated up to the Kentucky standard of gallantry. Thirty Parisian women sent to Louisville would have been acclaimed as queens of their sex, though they were as ugly as Xantippe. That's one of the many differences between Paris, France, and Paris, Kentucky.

"As a matter of international comity, however, we would advise these flippant Parisian journalists to be mightily keefer how they express themselves on the subject in the hearing of the young women from Kentucky. Marse Henry's beauties may be beauties or not—that is perhaps a matter of taste—but they certainly do know how to take care of themselves."

Court Day.

Yesterday was the duller and hottest court day for sometime. A small crowd was in town, but very little stock of any kind changed hands.

Simon Weil sold 30 head of feeders to Mr. Harry Holt, of near town, and 42 head to Mr. Chas. Stephenson, of Clintonville.

Mann & Clark bought a pair of 5-year-old mare mules from Wm. Crim for $400.

There were not over five mules on the market.

A number of horsemen were here to buy but no horses on the market to suit them.

Rockefeller Escapes.

When the news was received over "the ticker" in Wall Street that Attorney-General Moody had decided not to press for any jail penalty against John D. Rockefeller and other Standard Oil officials "the fact was pointed to joyfully," says a New York journal in its market report, "as evidence that the Roosevelt Administration and the trust were now in accord and that occurrences in the near future will demonstrate clearly that the two have reached a thorough understanding. Wall Street regarded the developments in connection with the Standard Oil investigation in Ohio by the Federal Government as a moral victory for the great trust." It seems impossible to divorce the Republican leaders from Wall Street influences and trust associations and the above Wall Street news indicates that the trusts will supply the sinews of war and that the campaign fund of the Republican party will be replenished from that source. The dollar subscription dodge of Chairman Sherman is only a fake to fool the voters into believing that trust influences have been banished from the Republican campaign.

Express Companies and Railroads.

There will have to be a shake-up in the management of Express companies and vice versa, which would indicate a conspiracy in restraint of trade, especially as there is no competition between express companies at joint points. What the people are bound to have before they get done legislating about corporations is competition, or where competition is not possible such just rates as the situation demands. If the new law is found not sufficient to insure that, the law will be further amended by Congress. Congress hereafter will be in the hands of the people instead of being as heretofore a corporation annex.

Listen to This Republican.

A Boston paper which supported McKinley for the presidency in 1896, says that Roosevelt's most prominent characteristics are—"brag, bluster, conceit, lawlessness, egotism, deceitfulness, impudence, treachery, and heartlessness." The same paper says that "Senator Lodge orders the suppression of every reference to reciprocity with Canada and is obeyed without question, whether in convention or Legislature." It likens Lodge to Quay and Platt, and asks: "Is it not time for self-respecting Republicans to look elsewhere?"

We agree with this Republican on this question, and will add that the time is ripe for self-respecting Democrats of Kentucky to retire a number of machine Democrats at the November primary.

Attempt to Assassinate Asbury Spicer.

An attempt was made Friday night to assassinate Asbury Spicer as he was enroute to his home from Jackson. One shot took effect in his back, and as Spicer spurred his horse the alleged assassins followed and fired at him several times, but none of the last volley of shots took effect.

Spicer is the principal witness for the Commonwealth against Judge James Hargis, Ed Calahan and John Abner and John Smith, charged with the murder of Dr. B. D. Cox, and was on his way home from Irvine, where he had testified for the Commonwealth in the motion for bail for Smith and Abner for the Cox killing. The latter are also under indictment for the murder of James B. Marcum, and their trial was called before Judge J. L. Dorsey at Beattyville, yesterday. Spicer is also a witness for the prosecution in that case.

Spicer made his confession regarding the part he, Abner and Smith took in the Cox killing the day Jim Hargis' motion for bail was heard by Judge T. G. Lewis at Jackson in June. He said he was given $100 and a cow by Jim Hargis, while Abner and Smith were given like amounts. Spicer swore that Abner and Smith fired the shots into Dr. Cox from the shed in the rear of Hargis Brothers' store, while Hargis and Callahan were in the yard adjoining. Spicer was corroborated by Curt Jett.

County Judge Takes Novel Position.

Upon certificate of Circuit Clerk Schwartz, of the Campbell Circuit Court, that County Judge Matt Moore refuses to sit in two lunacy cases in that county, the Governor has commissioned Attorney M. R. Lockhart, of Newport as Special Judge. Circuit Judge Berry is away on his vacation, and the County Judge maintains that he has no jurisdiction to sit in the trial of such cases, and in counties where there are courts of continuous session it is the duty of the Circuit Judge. No other County Judge has ever taken such a position in such a matter.

Dangers of Defective Plumbing!

Defective plumbing permits the entrance into the house of sewer gas bearing germs or contagious disease to which the human system readily succumbs. Sewer gas is not necessarily generated in the sewer, but is frequently created in the plumbing system within the home and enters the apartments through defective fixtures. If in doubt, consult us regarding the piping and repairing defective fixtures with "STANDARD" Porcelain Enamelled Ware, acknowledged as the best sanitary equipment.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

By local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear.
There is only one way to cure deafness,
and that is by constitutional remedies.
Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound of imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness, caused by catarrh, that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Surprised By a Bird.

An Irishman in Boston, Mass., who had made money in the contracting business, sent over to Ireland for a young brother, who landed at Charlestown, and was taken around to see the sights. Passing through a park the greenhorn saw a parrot that had escaped from its cage, and was perched on the limb of a tree.

"What a purty bird; I would like to catch that," he said.

The brother tried to stop him but he had climbed the tree and started to crawl out on the limb, when the parrot said, "Well, what is it?"

"Excuse me, sor," the greenhorn hastened to say, "I thought ye wur a bird."

Hints and Helps.

A preserve closet should be dark, dry and cool. Before preserving time whitewash the walls and have the shelves well scrubbed and dried to make the air pure and wholesome.

If a napkin is wrung out of hot water and wrapped around sandwiches and they are put into a cool storeroom they will remain as moist as when first spread.

For a "strawberry roll" cut a thin layer of piecrust into oblong pieces, cover with a layer of jam, roll it up and bake it in a hot oven.

An excellent way to use a stale loaf of bread is to make what is known as Spanish fritters. Cut stale bread into even slices. Dip each into a mixture of egg and milk, using one egg to a cup and a half of milk. Butter a hot frying pan and brown the slices in it.
Serve them hot, either with a little powdered sugar and cut lemon or with a bit of current jelly. Sometimes a pinch of grated nutmeg is added to the egg and milk and as this is a sufficient flavor when it is used, the lemon will not be needed.

Nine Burglaries in One Night.

Fulton, Ky., awoke Saturday morning with a new record of nine burglaries in one night, all the robberies netting the perpetrators much booty.
At a public mass meeting held there measures were adopted to appoint a vigilance committee to hunt down the robbers. For the last two weeks each night has a lengthy list of hold-ups and burglaries.

Col. Cuthbert Bullitt Dead.

After an eventful career of almost ninety-seven years, Col. Cuthbert Bullitt, in his younger days the Beau Brummel of the South, and the oldest native-born resident of Louisville, died at 7:15 Saturday morning in his apartments at St. Joseph's Infirmary, Louisville.

He celebrated his ninety-sixth anniversary of birth January 16 last, and at that time expressed the hope that he would live to round out a full century.
Death was due to infirmities incident to his advanced age. He breathed his last in the presence of his body servant, Edward Dorsey, who has ministered to his wants for the last three years. No one else was in the room at the time, but relatives were notified immediately. Col. Bullitt was one of the most famous and picturesque characters of the ante-bellum days.

having purchased about 100 that averaged 725 pounds at 3½.

cattle, averaging 1,555 pounds, at 5 cents to Jonas Weil. This is said to be year will approximate 300,000 bushels, 85 per cent. of which is now in the hands of commission men and millers.

of fine quality, and free from smut, cheat and rye, are being offered here for seeding purposes at 80 cents per bushel in quantities to suit farmers.

ger & Schwartzchild, of New York, Friday purchased from G. G. and J. C.
Hamilton, of Montgomery, 194 fat cattle for Eastern market. The cattle averaged 1,460 pounds. The lot brought a total of $14,162, or 5 cents per pound straight.

were shipped from Lexington the day before and died as soon as they reach-the same car escaped.

—Wm. B. Woodford sold to Wm. Mc-Intyre, of Millersburg, 168 lambs that weighed 15,155 pounds at 6 cents per fat cattle in the pink of condition that he has refused 5½ cents for.

—Nichol Bros. closed the threshing season by making a record-breaking run in threshing their own crop near Hutchison Friday. Starting at 1 p.
m. and running until 7 p. m., they threshed 805 sacks of wheat, which made a little over two bushels to the sack. The grain was of excellent quality and averaged 38 bushels to the acre. During the run the machine part of the time turned out three sacks per minute, being fed by ten wagons.

—The popular colors of Woodford Clay, the young Bourbon county turf-man, were again borne to stake victory on Saturday at Brighth Beach by Content. This good daughter of imp.
Bridgewater and Phalia, who won the Latonia Oaks, had no trouble in defeating a fair field for the Seashore Handicap, with a net value to the winner of $2,100. Those finishing behind her were Colonial Girl, Rubie, Red Leaf, Tokalon, winner of the Brooklyn Handicap, and Samson, recent winner of the Iroquois Stakes.—Farmer and Breeder.

Former Kentuckian Suicides.

Thomas S. Baughman, of Washington, D. C., thirty-seven years of age, a railway mail clerk with a run on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, shot himself Saturday afternoon and died fifteen minutes later. He had been estranged from his wife two years.

Saturday Baughman called his wife by telephone and asked her to come to his lodging, 415 Second street, Northwest, in Washington. She did so and after saying, "I can live this life no longer," he fired a shot into his breast.

Baughman came of a well-known Kentucky family and was a protege of Senator Blackburn, who caused his reinstatement in the railway service after he left it several years ago. His wife is also from a well-known Kentucky family.

The rectifiers of Louisville say they will refuse to pay taxes under the cent rectified from any but single stamp spirits. The Auditor will refuse to issue licenses unless the tax is paid on all rectified goods, and the Court of Appeals will probably be called upon to construe the law.

STRANGE ADVICE!

Dr. G. G. Green gives alert personal attention to his great humanitarian contract.

In our Almanac for many years past we have given unusual advice to those afflicted with coughs, colds, throat or lung troubles or consumption. We have told them if they did not receive any special benefit after the use of one 75-cent size bottle of German Syrup, to consult their doctor. We did not ask them or urge them to use a large number of bottles, as is the case in the advertising of many other remedies. Our confidence in German Syrup makes it possible for us to give such advice. We know by the experience of over 35 years that one 75-cent bottle of German Syrup will speedily relieve or cure the worst coughs, colds, bronchial or lung troubles—and that,
even in bad cases of consumption, one large bottle of German Syrup will work wonders. New trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

Peanut Trade Secrets.Some peanuts that are bought ready roasted are of a light yellow color.
Others, however, are pronounced brunnettes. There is a reason for this.
The great American peanut will remain crisp only a day or two after roasting and in damp weather only a few hours. It absorbs moisture rapidly, so that two days after roasting the finest nuts lose their crispness and are to all intents and purposes as though they had never been cooked.
The Italian and Greek peanut men freshen up their stocks by roasting again and re-roasting. When the process has been repeated three or four times, though, the peanut begins to take on a tawny hue, which is considered objectionable by those who have stands in the better parts of town.
These much roasted goobers are therefore sold at a discount to Greeks and Italians who have stands near railroad stations and the cheaper resorts, who can roast, re-roast and re-roast them indefinitely until they are finally sold.
—New York Press.A Camera Friend.A well known criminal lawyer one day snatched into a police court just as a case was called. It appeared that the defendant had no attorney, and the judge glanced about the room to see whom he might assign to the case."I'll take it, judge," the late comer said, wishing to pass away the time.
"By the way, what is the man charged with?" the attorney presently asked."He's a camera fiend of the worst sort, Mr. Brown," the judge said, with a slight smile. "I expect to send him to the workhouse for about three months.""What?" the lawyer shouted indignantly. "Your honor must be joking.
Send a man to the rock pile for three months for a little harmless amusement like taking pictures?""Well," the judge said mildly, "he doesn't take pictures much—it's the cameras he takes."—New York Times.A Wonderful Escape.Fieschi tried to assassinate King Louis Philippe of France in July, 1835.
The king was riding along the lines of the national guard in the Boulevard du Temple. There came a crash and a rush of bullets. Louis Philippe's arm was grazed, his horse was shot in the neck. Marshal Mortier fell dead and about thirteen other people were killed and thirty wounded. Fieschi had taken the upper floors of a house several weeks before and there rigged up an oaken frame four feet by three feet six inches, supported on four posts of oak and itself supporting twenty-five gun barrels fixed in grooves at various angles so as to command an area of twenty-five feet in length and ten feet in height. When he fired the train of powder that let off his battery the king would have been killed if four barrels had not burst and two missed fire.Ancient Locks.Locks were used in the time of the pharaohs. At Karnak the visitor is shown the sculptured representation of a lock which is almost exactly like one kind of lock used in Egypt at the present day. Homer says that Penelope used a brass key to open her wardrobe.
He adds that it was very crooked and had an ivory handle. A Greek writer who lived in the last half of the twelfth century explains that such keys were undoubtedly very ancient, although still to be seen in Constantinople and elsewhere. Roman locks, like the Egyptian, required a partial sliding of the key. They were, however, more intricate.Darwin and Books.Of Darwin it is affirmed that he seemed unaware of the difference in the value of books and would treat a Zachmendorf binding with the same scant courtesy that he exercised toward a penny pamphlet. Covers appeared to him a useless weight and decidedly in the way, and he often got rid of them by ripping them off. Sometimes the book was borrowed. It is said that in the end his friends used to give him any book which he wished to borrow, for they knew that, if it were ever returned, its usefulness as a book would be at an end.Have a Definite Aim.No life amounts to much until it has a programme—something definite, something particular. Nothing else can take the place of it. Education cannot, talent cannot, genius cannot, hard work cannot. Until there is a definite aim the energies will run to waste, the ability be squandered. The faculties degenerate when working without a definite aim.With Lightning Rapidity."Wonderful eye that boy of mine's got," said the proud father.
"That so?" mechanically replied the man who was trying to get away.
"You never saw such a sense of proportion," cried the proud father. "Pass that boy the cake dish and he'll spot the biggest piece on it every time."A Political Pointer.Bragley—Restaurant waiters would way—I don't see how. Bragley—Haven't you noticed that they carry everything before them?A Hot One.Sunday was another hot day, and crowded the other hot days of the past week for supremacy. The thermometer registered 88 degrees. There have been several days this summer that the thermometer has climbed to a greater height than this, but Sunday, to the people, was as hot as any of those which preceded it.Protect Your Property.Now is the time to protect your Estimate Too Low.Some of the Republican leaders in Washington who are figuring on the political complexion of the next Congress concede that the Democrats will gain thirty-seven seats. The Democrats say this estimate is decidedly too low.Heir to $5,000,000.A telegram has been received at Lexington from Dallas, Tex., giving the information that the will of the late George M. D. Grisby, who died recently leaving an estate valued at $5,000,- 000 to Mrs. J. H. Rieb, wife of a humble mechanic of Lexington, had been probated. Mr. Grisby was a brother of Mrs. Rieb and a native of Kentucky.

He went to Texas many years ago and began life as a railroad laborer. His will was written in Lexington about a year ago while Mr. Grisby was on a visit to his sister. The document was prepared by a Lexington attorney and its contents were known to Mrs. Rieb.
J. H. Rieb, the husband of the heiress, has lived in Lexington for many years, where he followed the trade of a carpenter, being in no way distinguished from his brethren of that humble craft.
The couple have seven children and until recently lived in a cottage at 229 East Sixth street. Since they were informed a few weeks ago of the vast addition to their estate the family have moved into a handsome residence on aristocratic Broadway. Mrs. Rieb is in Dallas, here she went immediately upon information of her brother's death.
From letters received from her by members of the family there is no doubt of the extent of the fortune, which is in real estate, cash, stocks and other securities.He Stayed Too Long.Will Davis, colored, hired a horse night about 9 o'clock. He was tried before acting Judge Fletcher Mann,

Hays at Bedford.Attorney General Hays, candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, spoke at Bedford, Ky., Saturday. His speech in part was the same as he made at New Castle, Ky.
Regarding attorney's fees he said Judge Hager at Mt. Sterling, stated that the fees paid for the assistance to the Attorney General grew out of transactions prior to the time he became auditor, and he had no personal knowledge in regard to them, but he was satisfied the services charged for were rendered and the amounts charged reasonable."Ask Hager," said the speaker, "or any of the machine if he or the machine did not have a bill introduced at the last session of the Legislature which,
if it had become a law, would have placed the entire legal business of the State under the control of the Governor and Auditor. Ask Hager if he did not have said bill introduced because I (Hays) had refused to comply with Hager's and the Governor's request to recommend the appointment of assistants in my office which would have saddled a like sum of $124,681.52 during the present administration on the

His partner in crime young Woodson, was released from custody several days before.

Meeting of Fiscal Court.

The Bourbon Fiscal Court met Friday in regular monthly session with Judge Dundon presiding.

But little business of importance was transacted. Claims for repairs of turnpikes due contractors to the amount of $1,967.54 were allowed, and additional miscellaneous claims against the county amounting to $956.25 were approved and the County Clerk instructed to issue warrants upon the Treasurer.

The court also appropriated the sum of $3,500 for turnpike repairs and improvements for the month of August and the amount ordered placed to the credit of the Turnpike Supervisor.

The contract entered into between the Bluegrass Traction Company for the grading and resurfacing of the Maysville & Lexington turnpike from the city limits to the Bethlehem and Hume and Bedford turnpikes was read and adopted. The Traction Company is raising the tracks along the distance above referred to, according to profile drawn by Engineer W. A. Newman, the contract including the franchise for the construction of the side tracks at the Bourbon fair grounds. The work is being pushed as rapidly as possible, the Traction Company having about completed the raising of the track, a force of twenty laborers being employed. The county is to do all the grading and furnishing of macadam material for which the Traction Company agrees to pay one-fifth of the cost, same not to aggregate more than $300.

When finished, which will be within the next three weeks, the county will roll and oil the pike free of charge to the Traction Company.

This will be rushed to completion in order for the proper transportation of the crowds that will attend the Bourbon Fair.

Circuit Clerk Butler Buys Farm.

Mr. C. E. Butler, our efficient Circuit Clerk, has purchased of Dr. D. A. Piatt, of Lexington, his 225-acre farm, situated on the Spurr or Greendale pike, about one-quarter of a mile from the Georgetown interurban road, and about three and a quarter miles from Lexington. Good judges of land say that this is one of the best farms in Fayette county. It is right opposite Mr. Belmont's Nursery stud, near the lands of J. B. Haggin, Milton Young and Wm. Barnes.

The farm is highly improved, and fitted for the handling of high-class horses, there being forty box stalls and a number of paddocks, with pure water piped into each lot from a never failing spring. For agricultural purposes the farm is peculiarly adapted, more than one hundred and fifty acres being virgin soil.

Paris Defeats Lexington Again.

Paris again took the Lexingtons into camp at the Belt Line Park in Lexington, Sunday before a crowd of 600 people, fully one-third of whom were Paris rooters. The game was intensely interesting and exciting from start to finish, being won and lost several times before the last Lexington batter fled out to center field in the ninth inning.

Paris went to the bat for the last time with one run needed to tie the game and two to win. Magee struck out. McBriar Singled, the Paris crowd of rooters splitting their throats with yells. Schroder walked, McBriar going to second. C. M. McBriar, as if responding to the cry for a home run, rapped the ball to the center field fence for three bases, scoring McBriar and Schroder and winning the game by a score of 6 to 5.

It was an occasion long to be remembered by the members of Rathbone Lodge. The Elks' Band furnished music during the evening. The tables, tastily decorated with the colors of the order, were set out on the lawn where the sumptuous spread was highly enjoyed by the Knights. The menu consisted of old country ham, fried chicken, lamb, peanut sandwiches, chicken croquettes, beaten biscuits, dressed eggs, corn pudding, pickles, cheese, sliced tomatoes, hot coffee, punch, lemonade, cake and watermelon.

PICTURE ON A HILL.

The Long Man of Wilmington, England, Measures 240 Feet.

About midway between Berwick and Polegate stations, at a point where the side of the hill is very precipitous, those who know exactly the spot where to look will be able to see from the railway carriage windows a sort of rude imitation of the human form outlined in white. The figure, which is between 200 and 300 feet in height, holds a long staff in each hand. This is the "Long Man of Wilmington," once the center of profound veneration and worship, but now merely an object of interest to the curious.

In order to obtain an adequate idea of this great hillside figure, dominating the surrounding country and appearing to watch as guardian over the little village below, it is desirable to approach it afoot, tramping along the winding lanes, as the pilgrims of old must have tramped when they came hither on the occasion of some great religious festival. Seen from afar, the figure does not appear to be of remarkable size, but gradually as one approaches the hill it assumes an imposing and definite shape.

The figure, about 240 feet in height, was merely shaped in the turf so as to allow the chair to appear through. In the course of time these depressions in the surface became almost imperceptible, and to such an extent was the figure neglected that at last it was only possible to make out the form at a distance when the slight hollows were marked by drifted snow or when the oblique rays of the rising or setting sun threw them into a deep shadow. In order to preserve the form of the Long Man, and to render it at the same time easily distinguishable at a distance the outline was marked by a single line of white bricks placed closely together. The effect has been to produce a somewhat startling figure, which is plainly visible in fine weather from a great distance.

There are in different parts of the country other examples of extremely rude and early hillside figures, and, although the very fact of their great antiquity renders it unlikely that historical or documentary evidence will be forthcoming as to their design or precise purpose, it is very satisfactory to find that an explanation has been found which will at once account for many of their peculiarities.

The theory is that these are sacrificial figures. We learn from the writings of Caesar that the Gauls (and the Britons were doubtless included) had figures of vast size, the limbs of which, formed of osiers, they filled with living men. The figure was ultimately fired, and the miserable victims perished in the flames.

There is a local saying in Sussex, probably of great antiquity, in which the Long Man is mentioned in reference to the weather. It runs:

When Elrie hill and Long Man has a cap
We at A'ston gets a drap.

Football in Burma.

"Chinloun," the Burmese form of football, is the national game. The name means "round basket," writes Mr. Kelly in his book on Burma, and the chinloun is really a ball about six inches in diameter formed of plaited rattans. The game is played by several youths or men, who stand in a circle a few feet apart. The ball having been thrown into play, the one nearest to whom it falls kicks it up into the air with the instep, knee or side of the foot. The effort is to keep it in the air as long as possible and without losing possession of the ball. A fancy stroke is to turn about face as the ball falls and kick it with the sole of the foot, although the elbows, head or any part of the body except hand and toes may be used. While playing no one leaves his place, but waits until the ball falls within his reach, when he in turn endeavors to retain its possession. It is a very pretty game to watch, and the skill of the performers is often surprising.

The Smallest Screws.

The smallest screws ever made are used in the manufacture of the miniature watches which are sometimes fitted in rings, shirt studs, bracelets, etc. They are the next thing to being invisible to the naked eye, looking like minute grains of sand. With a good glass, however, it may be plainly seen that each is a perfect screw, having a number of threads equal to 1,200 to the inch. These tiny screws are four one-thousandths of an inch in diameter and seven one-thousandths of an inch in length. It is estimated that a lady's thimble of average size would hold 100,000 of them. No attempt is ever made to count these "tiny triumphs of mechanical ingenuity" other than to get a basis for estimation. The method usually pursued in determining their number is to carefully count 100 and then place them on a delicate balance, the number of a given amount being determined by the weight of these.

Cars For Man and Beast.

From Salzburg you go to Munich. While traveling through the mountains of Bavaria you drop suddenly from the sublime to the ridiculous by catching a glimpse of a car bearing a label of which this is the translation:

"For thirty-two men or six horses." On inquiry you learn that the Bavarian railroads run fourth class cars, on which the very poor may travel for a trifle or which may be used at the option of the railroad to transport equine freight. Later you have an opportunity to inspect some of these fourth class cars, and you find them to be similar to our own freight cars, although much smaller. Plain wooden benches form the seats, which may be removed to accommodate the live stock. Most of the European freight cars and many of the passenger cars have only four wheels and look like toy affairs compared to our own.—Chicago Post.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE.

A Case in Which the Jury's Foreman Saved the Accused.

Very eminent legal authorities agree that as to the facts of a case the jury is more likely to be right than the judge. An instance comes to our mind, one of the most extraordinary in the history of our legal system, the account of which we owe to the man who tried and presided over the trial, Lord Chief Justice Dyer. This was a "clear case" of murder. The victim had been found stabbed to death in a field wood, by his side the pitchfork with which the deed had been done. The man who owned the fork was arrested, and the blood stained suit he had worn was found hidden in a mattress.

Shorn of testimony from any one who had seen the crime actually committed, there was not a link missing from the chain of evidence against the prisoner. It was in vain that he pleaded not guilty, everything was so conclusively clear against him. A verdict of guilty was expected immediately from the jury, but the foreman asked that as "the life" of a fellow creature was at stake the jury might be allowed to retire. The judge did not understand why they should wish to do so in so simple a case; still, the jury had its wish. It did not return. The court adjourned for luncheon; the jury did not come back in the afternoon, and in spite of several anxious inquiries from the bench, it had not made up its mind when the court rose for the day—there was one man holding out. The jury was locked up for the night, and in the morning brought in a verdict of not guilty! This was a poser, and the judge dismissed the jury, saying, "The blood of the deceased lies at your door."

Private inquiry by the judge elicited the fact that the foreman, a man of unblemished reputation and of considerable estate, had been the cause of the verdict, which the rest had been starved into accepting. The judge sent for this gentleman, and in his private room begged him to explain the mystery of his obduracy and the amazing finding of his fellows, first pledging himself to preserve inviolate any confidence which the other might repose in him. Then the foreman told him how he himself had met the victim for whose murder the prisoner had been tried, how this man had sought to take advantage of his official position and exact unjust tithes, how they quarreled and fought, how the man had attempted to kill him with a fork, and how he (the foreman of the jury) had killed his antagonist with his own pitchfork, then fled. The prisoner, coming along, had found the man dying, and in endeavoring to succor him had got blood upon his clothes, and in his confusion had taken the dead man's fork and left his own in his place. This was why the foreman had held out and why the prisoner escaped.—London Standard.

What a "Wed" Means.

Among the Anglo-Saxons the bridegroom gave a pledge or "wed" at the betrothal ceremony. This "wed" included a ring, which was placed on the maiden's right hand, where it remained until at the marriage it was transferred to the left. Englishwomen at one time wore the wedding ring on the thumb. Many portraits of ladies in Queen Elizabeth's days are so depicted. In the reign of George III. brides usually removed the ring from its proper abiding place to the thumb as soon as the ceremony was over. In Spain the gift of a ring is looked upon as a promise of marriage and is considered sufficient proof for a maiden to claim her husband. It is a custom to pass little pieces of bride's cake through the wedding ring, and those to whom these pieces are given place them under their pillows at night to dream of their lovers. These "dreamers," as they are called, should be drawn nine times through the ring. Many brides, however, are so superstitious that neither for that purpose nor at any other time will they take the ring off their finger after it has once been placed there.

THE MOOR OF VENICE

SOME OF THE OTHELLOS AND IAGOS OF THE PAST.

Few Famous Actors Have Been Successful in the Great Tragedy—Edmund Kean's Characterization of the Moor—Kean's Death.

One is struck by the number of great actors who have attempted Othello and failed in it. The really successful Othellos are a very small and select company. Burbage, one assumes, was the original Moor, and was probably as good in it as in any other part he played.

We get in Mr. Pepys' Diary two quaint references to the play. On Oct. 11, 1659, he tells us he went with Mr. Salisbury and Mr. Creed to see "The Moor of Venice," as it was always called then. It "was well done. Burt acted the Moor. By the same token a very pretty lady that sat by me called out to see Desdemona smothered."

Nine years later, on Feb. 6, 1668, he writes: "To the king's playhouse, and there in an upper box did see 'The Moor of Venice,' but ill acted in most parts, Mohun, which did a little surprise me, not acting Iago's part by much so well as Clun used to do; nor another Hart's, which was Cassio's, nor indeed Burt doing the Moor's so well as I once thought he did." But Mr. Pepys was in a bad temper that night, for his carriage had broken down on the way home, and he was "mightily vexed, poor wretch."

Betterton's Othello would appear to have been a remarkable performance. One writer speaks of "the terrible force of his Othello," and Addison says: "The wonderful agony which he appeared in when he examined the circumstance of the handkerchief in the part of Othello, the mixture of love that intruded upon his mind upon the innocent answers Desdemona makes, betrayed in his gesture such a variety and vicissitude of passions as would admonish a man to be afraid of his own heart."

It was in the Portugal Street theater, sometimes styled the Duke's theater, that Betterton played, but we have unfortunately but little record of his appearance in the part, nor do we know how he was dressed for it. The costume some of the old actors adopted for the part appears to modern taste quite ludicrous. In his "Autobiography" Reynolds tells us he remembered seeing Spranger Barry play Othello in a full suit of gold laced scarlet, a small cocked hat, knee breeches and silk stockings.

Garrick was but a poor Othello except in the scene where Iago first implants the suspicion of Desdemona, and Quinn was very little superior. But Garrick did, at any rate, adopt Moorish costume, a startling innovation, which led one writer to say that he was unmeaningly dressed. On the first night Quinn was in the pit and when Garrick entered exclaimed in allusion to Hogarth's black boy: "Here's Pompey, by—! Where's the lamp and the teakettle?"

John Philip Kemble also did much to improve the public ideas on the fitness of costume in the theater. The stiff skirted coat, breeches, waistcoat, black face, white, full bottomed wig and three cocked hat which tradition prescribed for Othello despite Garrick's laudable endeavor was swept away after Kemble's time. He himself played Iago much better than Othello, and Byron said of the performance that it was perfection.

Another very excellent Iago was George Frederick Cooke. Playing the part one night at York, he was loudly hissed by two or three men in the audience, who cried out, "What a villain!" It was a compliment he much appreciated.

Coming to Edmund Kean, we find this actor playing Othello and Iago on alternate nights. Dr. Doran says of Kean's Othello, "In the fiercer scenes he was unsurpassable, and in the great third act none who remembers him will, I think, be prepared to allow that he ever had or is likely to have an equal." His Iago was quite original, "a careless, cordial, comfortable villain," as Hazlitt calls him.

Subsequently Kean played Othello to the Iago of Young. It had been arranged that they should alternate the parts, but after the first performance Kean preferred to leave Iago to Young. "I flatter myself," he said to Whitbread, who was then manager of Drury Lane, "he could not act Othello as I, yet what chance should I have in Iago after him with his musical voice?"

Kean's last appearance on the stage, on March 25, 1833, was in "Othello," with his son Charles as Iago. Kean went through the play, "dying as he went," until he came to "Farewell! Othello's occupation gone." Then he gasped for breath, tried to begin the next speech and fell forward on his son's shoulder, moaning: "I am dying. Speak to them for me."

Charles Young was excellent as Iago, but when he tried Othello later to the Iago of Macready he failed altogether. Hazlitt said of the performance: "Young in Othello was like a great humming top, and Macready in Iago like a mischievous boy whipping him."

There have been other Othellos since, but few of renown. There was Gustavus Brookes, who appeared in the part at the Olympic in 1848; Charles Kean, at the Princess in 1853; Salvini, who played it first at the Queen's, in Long-acre, in 1875; Pechter played it without success in 1861; Phelps played it at the Princess, at Covent Garden, at Sadler's Wells and elsewhere; Sir Henry Irving first played the part in 1876 and subsequently alternated Othello and Iago with Edwin Booth; and, more recently, Forbes Robertson and Hubert Carter.

There have, of course, been burlesques

Othellos, but in three cases at least the burlesque was quite unintentional. Othello was chosen for the first appearance of Samuel Foote at the Haymarket in 1744. The future droll and mimic was short and stout, with a round, flat face, and his acting of the Moor to the lago of Macklin must have been very funny. But a century later, at the same theater, Sothorn, of Dundreary fame, played Othello with Buckstone as Iago, which must have been even more amusing. Charles Mathews, the Seymour Hicks of an earlier age, also attempted Othello once, but only once.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

NAME SPELLINGS.

Diversity of Orthography Was Quite Common in the Past.

Nowadays if a man whose name was Brown should spell it Brown, Brown, Brown or Brun he would no doubt get into a variety of complicated troubles. Such a diversity of orthography does not seem to have annoyed the English poet Shakespeare, however, for his name appears with five different spellings, two of which are in his own handwriting.

In the register in the church at Stratford the name of the greatest English dramatist is written Shakespeare. It appears as Shakespeare in the body of his will, but this same will is indorsed "Mr. Shakespeare's Will." The poet himself wrote his name Shakespeare and Shakespeare, and now it is spelled Shakespeare.

Sir Walter Raleigh had numerous ways of spelling his name. It appears at different times and places as Rawley, Raleigh, Raleigh, Rawleigh and Rawleley.

There is Ben Jonson's signature in which an h appears.

Dryden often spelled his name with an l.

Samuel Butler, author of "Hudibras," was known to write his name Boteler.

Dr. Crovie was so anxious to have his name pronounced correctly that he wrote it six different ways.

The French name Villiers during the history of that family was spelled fourteen ways.

The girl's name Mand was one of those that have come down through the ages from the Saxon. Maud was originally Magan, which means to be able.

From the name Hannah the Greeks made Anna and Ananias. Anna, growing in favor, sent off various other offshoots, among which are Annette, Antia, Anne, Nancy, etc.

The name Johann was brought to England by the Crusaders. Later it was contracted to John. In Ireland it became Shawn and in Scotland Ian. It took some years for this name to reach Russia. When it did it was called Ivan, and in Germany it became Hans.

The word William comes from ancient Teutonic mythology. It derived its origin from one of three principal gods—Odin, Will and Ve.

In like manner we have Margaret from the Persian, meaning the child of light; Barbara from the Greek, meaning strength; Agnes from the Roman, Catharine from the fourth saint and countless others.

Watering Seed Beds.

Amateurs and inexperienced growers of flowers often make the mistake of watering the soil in which seeds are sown immediately after the sowing, whether the soil is moist or not. The practice is a harmful one, generally speaking, and should not be indulged in except in unusual cases. If the soil or compost in which the seeds are sown is moist at the time of sowing no water should be used, as the soil becomes stiff and forms a crust on the surface which prevents the seeds from pushing through. After sowing the seed in any soil, except an exceedingly dry one, it is better to wait a day or two before watering or until the soil dries up pretty well. Then apply gently with a fine sprinkler just enough water to moisten the soil moderately throughout, which will suffice until the soil shows signs of dryness again. It is not necessary to give a little sprinkling every day, as some believe, for such treatment only makes matters worse.

The Only Instance.

The following perhaps is the only instance in which a man beat an insurance company: "A peculiar case has arisen at Sioux City, Iowa, where M. J. Harrison was insured in a life insurance company of Des Moines for $2,000. Harrison became ill and his physicians said that he had but a few days left to live. His wife, being short of funds and desiring to give him every advantage, decided to compromise with the insurance company. Through an attorney she offered to accept $1,800 for the policy in view of the fact that it could become a claim for $2,000 within a short time. The company sent its representative, who examined Harrison and concluded that he was at the point of death. The company then offered Mrs. Harrison $1,500 for the policy, and the offer was accepted. Much to the surprise of both parties interested, Harrison commenced to recover and regained complete health."

SLAVES OF THE PIPE

A GLIMPSE OF ONE OF THE SECRET
OPIUM DENS OF TOULON.

The Eastern Madness and Its Victims in the French Navy—Varying Effects of the First, Second and Third Pipes of the Drug.

"You are going to Toulon?" said an attaché of one of the ministries to me some months ago. "Then you will see the curse of the French navy, the eastern madness, which our colleagues at the colonial office and at the ministry of marine are trying hard to suppress."

"The eastern madness?" I asked. "What is that?"

"Opium smoking," said my friend laconically. "Ask some of the Toulon newspaper men to take you round."

It was one of the first things I asked about when I got down to Toulon, and the following is an account of what I saw:

We were in a café near the harbor. A tall and very handsome woman sat at the table opposite to us and nodded lazily to my companion. This did not surprise me at all, because all Toulon, from the prefect maritime to the seavengers in the streets, knew him and called him by his name. There was a lazy weariness or, if you like, a weary laziness in the woman's eyes which was curiously noticeable.

"Are you going to smoke a pipe?" she said. He looked at me inquiringly. "Oh, bring your friend with you. He doesn't belong to the government, does he?"

And so we all three got up and went out. I do not know exactly where we went, for the back streets of Toulon are a very Alsatia for intricacy. We unlocked a door with a key which Madame carried in her pocket. We climbed three flights of dark stairs and knocked at another door.

It was opened at last, after about a quarter of an hour, by a young woman in a kimono and curl papers. She looked even sleepier than our companion and did not trouble to invite us in. She merely left the door open, lounged on in front, and we followed.

Imagine a room in which all you can see at first is the dirty yellow of some coconut matting on the floor, a few cushions covered in bright colors and several pairs of feet. It is a little puzzling at first, but you realize after a moment that the only lamp is on the floor and that it has a heavy shade, so that the light does not light up the room.

I became used to the semidarkness soon and saw that I was in a small square room, in which there were six or eight people, three women, including our companion, and several men. I noticed that the trousers which the men wore were those of navy officers. I looked at my friend, the journalist, inquiringly.

"Oh, yes," he said, "and they don't care. Once an opium smoker always an opium smoker."

We had spoken in a whisper, but one of the men, a good looking fellow, who must have been a smart officer not long before, raised himself on one elbow and glowered at us. "Curse you!" he said. "Be quiet. Curse you!" And he dropped back on to the mat again.

"The second sleep after the first pipe," said my friend.

"How do you know?" "Because they are always irritable then," he said. "After the second pipe it takes a good deal to disturb them, and after the third, unless they are very seasoned smokers, you could let off crackers next to them before they awoke of themselves, and they would think that it was wind flapping the sails."

Another of the men sat up. I must explain that there was no furniture whatever in the room. There was coconut matting on the floor, there were a few pillows, and that was all. But the lighted lamp was in the corner, and in the middle, among the feet, was a thing which looked a little like a Turkish bubble-pipe, a lamp of glass, in which I think spirit was burned, making a small flame.

Next to it, a little white pot with a dark brown paste in it that looked like varnish, and on a small rack, like a pen rack, several knitting needles. When the man sat up the woman in the kimono and curl papers crawled over to him, took one of the knitting needles, put her finger and thumb into the paste and cooked a ball of it on the point of a knitting needle over the flame of the lamp.

And I noticed then, as the smell became more acute, that the whole room had a treacly sickliness about it. That, of course, was the opium. Next to the man, where I suppose he had dropped it, was a long cherry wood stem with a bulb of amber at one end and a tiny cup at the other. I think the cup had a pin in it, but I am not sure. The woman put the little ball of opium, which had frizzled and sizzled in the flame, into the cup and held the amber bulb to the man's mouth.

He drew at the pipe, inhaling the smoke, but he was too far gone to hold the pipe for himself. The woman had to do that for him. He stopped inhaling after a moment or two, and she tore the neck of his shirt open.

"Narrow squeak that," said my friend. "I kiss 'at chap. He smokes eighteen or twenty pipes sometimes, and then anything might happen to him. He would rather die of suffocation than take the trouble to undo a button."

"But what is the insidious charm of opium?" I asked. "That I can't tell you," said my friend, "because a first pipe or two won't teach it to you, and unless you are a fool, you will never smoke a third."

The woman who had brought us in and in whose room we were had just prepared a pipe for herself. "Smoke?" she said, and put her pipe to my lips. I took two or three whiffs and then got out of the room and the house as quickly as possible.

I learned from my friend, who came after me, that all the men in the room were navy officers. I learned, too, the next day, when I felt better, that opium, which in spite of the efforts made by the government to check commerce in the drug, is currently sold in all the ports and particularly on those of the south, is making terrible ravages among the officers of the French navy.

Your opium smoker is a dangerous man on board a ship, for he is like a sleepwalker. He acts unconsciously, but with apparent consciousness, and when under the influence of the drug anything might happen either to him or to the ship under his charge without his caring. The minister of marine is doing his utmost to repress the curse, and all thinking France hopes that he may succeed. —New Orleans Times-Democrat.

WAYS OF THE SPANIARDS.

Oriental Habit of Secluding Their Women Still Prevalent.

Original usage with regard to women still prevails in Spain, where there are no suffragists and no problems of sex. Even in society in Madrid men do not pay afternoon calls on married women, the chief form of entertainment being the evening party, or tertulia. The jealousy of Spaniards of both sexes is notorious. The eastern habit of secluding their women is still prevalent among most Spaniards; hence the illiteracy of the women, the tiresome formality of Spanish functions, the conventionality of society manners. Occasionally an American lady in the diplomatic "set" tears down the barriers of convention and astonishes "society" by her western ways, but Spanish women regard the innovation as we would the capers of a circus horse in Rotten row, and you may live years in Spain on the best terms with a Spaniard before he invites you to meet his wife. You may catch more butterflies in an afternoon than obtain even a sight of the faces of the women whose husbands you meet daily in the course of a whole year's acquaintance.

But in dancing the Spanish woman is queen of her sex. To see the real thing you must get hold of a gypsy band or visit some humble dancing place in Seville or in the south. There is no dancing in the world so poetic, passionate, suggestive or graceful. Spain is the true home of the dance. There are the jota of Aragon, with its fine abandon, yet stately time; the tango, resembling the danse du ventre of Moorish Spain—the dance of gesture and suggestion; the graceful cañuca, with its chironomic play of head and arms; the jaleo de Jerez, which gypsies dance in whirling fantastic measure; the quaint dances of the Basque provinces and scores of minor local dances more or less alike peculiar to different localities. But the great dances are the bolero, the seguidilla, the chacona and the fandango of the south. These dances are the soul and epitome of Spain. In all of them prose gesture, the mystery of true dancing, plays an important part. In all of them the poetry of love and motion is exhibited with extraordinary subtlety and expression. —Austin Harrison in Nineteenth Century.

Weight Before and After Meals.

Why is it that a man does not weigh a pound more after eating a pound of food than he did before? A little reflection will readily explain this apparent mystery. During the process of mastication, deglutition, etc., certain muscles are brought into active play. Now, it is a well established fact in physiology that the exercise of any muscle or set of muscles necessitates a temporary waste of tissue and that a certain amount of carbon is eliminated and passed off during the course of a meal. This loss, however, is trifling as compared with that of respiration and perspiration, both of which functions are increased during the operation of making a meal. The length of time one may take to consume a pound of food makes but little difference in the losses. If it be eaten leisurely, there is but slight increase of respiration or perspiration, whereas if it be hurried through both are abnormally accelerated; hence by the time the meal is finished the consumer has lost appreciably in both moisture and carbonic acid. The above explains in a rough but clear manner why it is that a man may eat a pound of food and yet not weigh but from one-third to five-eighths of a pound more than he did before the meal.

Our Washington Letter.

BY EARL W. MAYO.

WASHINGTON, August 6.—In supporting the movement of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in its efforts to arouse the people to demand larger rivers and harbors appropriations, Representative John Wesley Gaines openly criticises the present policy of devoting a great part of the country's income to preparations for war, and so little to the advancement of peaceful and cheap water transportation.

"The people should get behind our military and naval committees," said Mr. Gaines, in an interview, given out today, "and behind the present President, and the next President, and demand that we cease building machinery to make ourselves a war nation, and continue this nation as a peace nation in fact. Our money is being spent mostly for the benefit of trusts engaged in making structural material in preparing us for war. Let us put an end to that, and stop teaching ourselves and other nations how to kill each other."

In making this suggestion, Mr. Gaines, who was extremely active during the past session in behalf of the railroad rate regulation, has evidently in mind a further betterment of the transportation system of the country. "I think the people of the United States should get behind the Rivers and Harbors Committee, and demand reasonable appropriations and prompt and constant work in improving our rivers and harbors," added Mr. Gaines. "I approve of the work of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress in endeavoring to stimulate sentiment in favor of larger appropriations for rivers and harbors improvements. We need larger appropriations and a more vigorous and constant prosecution of projects already begun. The present policy of small appropriations has delayed the improvement of the Cumberland River as well as other projects throughout the country. We were held back in securing the opening of the locks near Nashville in the Cumberland River, by the Steel Trust holding us up by submitting bids for steel and material that were unreasonable and repudiated. This Trust should be punished in the courts."

It is pointed out that the recommendations of the last session of Congress for the improvement of the Cumberland River has very little chance of becoming an actuality unless the coming Rivers and Harbors bill far outstrips its predecessors. This, too, in spite of the fact that an improved system of inland waterways would offer to the shipper a means of transportation which while regulating railroad rates, would be but one-sixth as large, that is, about one mill per mile, instead of seven as at present. Moreover, it is further shown that inland waterways improved by the government could never be monopolized by a carrier. However, there are now $300,000,000 of approved projects to come before the Rivers and Harbors Committee, whereas the precedent of the last ten years has limited the appropriations for rivers and harbors improvement to something like $19,500,000 a year. There are, furthermore, great projects totalling something like three times $300,000,000 clamoring for attention from Congress.

Considering the national importance of some of the proposals and the backing behind them, the Cumberland project in spite of its merits will have little chance of anything like adequate allotment of fund unless the total appropriation far surpasses that heretofore customary. In view of this condition, the Congressional delegations of Tennessee and Kentucky have given to the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which is endeavoring to awaken the people of all sections to the necessity of an organized and united movement for an annual rivers and Harbors bill of at least $50,000,000, their hearty endorsement.

"In internal taxes," says Mr. Gaines, "Kentucky and Tennessee, have paid millions more than is necessary to complete this work. The actual commerce is there and would be increased ten-fold by this necessary and reasonable improvement."

Negroes Honor "Stonewall" Jackson.

A handsome memorial window to Gen. Thomas (Stonewall) Jackson has been unveiled in the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian (negro) church, of Roanoke, Va. The Rev. L. L. Downing originated the testimonial and collected the funds for it, entirely for negroes. Downing's father and mother were members of a Sunday school class of negro slaves, taught by Gen. Jackson before the war. On the window is a picture of an army camping on the banks of a stream, the inscription underneath being Jackson's last orders: "Let us cross over the river and rest in the shade of the trees."

The Vindicated Stranger.

"It's quite a heavy shower we're having," he said, cheerfully, to the man who had entered with his clothes soaked and umbrella dripping.

"Yes, sir," said the stranger, testily, "it is a heavy shower. But you have failed to remark also the interesting facts that the shower is falling downward from above, and that it is raining on both sides of the street. Also you have neglected to observe that this is the year of 1906, that the earth is round, and that there are four seasons in the year. But I am obliged to you for your information about the weather." And the stranger walked away with a glitter of vindictive triumph in his eye.

The Russian Translator of Dickens.

Irinarch Ivansvich Vrodenensky was the son of a poor but intelligent village pope or priest who tilled his glebe to feed and clothe his large family of daughters and this only son, to whom he still found time to impart the rudiments of education. Irinarch was a sickly and lonesome boy, cut off from all playfellows by his ascetic though well meaning father, and he grew up to manhood in bitter poverty, having sometimes literally nowhere to lay his head. Yet, in spite of all obstacles, he became a distinguished scholar, a versatile linguist and a beloved pedagogue in the military schools at St. Petersburg. He was growing in fame and favor with the authorities and had been called upon to undertake educational work of the highest importance when his blindness and premature death cut short his brave career. His translations of Dickens, Thackeray, Fenimore Cooper, etc., are classical and laid the foundation of the wonderful popularity which their works still enjoy in Russia.—Notes and Queries.

Without Counting.

Archbishop Temple was noted for his mathematical ability. A peculiarity of his power, not in computation or analysis, but in the ability to see a definite number of objects without actually counting them in the ordinary sense, is mentioned in Mr. Sandford's memoirs of the archbishop. Everybody sees three objects, not as one and one and one, but as three. Most people can see four; some see five and even six. Many of those who think they simply see six would discover if they observed the process carefully that they really make a quick count. But Dr. Temple certainly saw higher numbers. I tested him quite suddenly more than once. "How many sheep in that field?" Instantly came the answer, "Nine." Once he saw thirteen. I think these were birds flying in a group. It was the same process with him to see nine or ten volumes in a bookshelf as it was with me to see even five. Given time, without counting, he saw larger numbers.

Derivation of "Whit" Sunday.

A perennial problem is that about the etymology of Whit Sunday, and the supporters of Whitsunday could speak more confidently with their adversaries if they remembered that the Welsh call the anniversary "Sulgwyn," which means "White Sun." This title preserves the Druidic tradition that the sun about this time turns white. No doubt the old British belief arose from the peculiar white glare of the sunlight reflected from the hawthorn blossoms, which must have been far more rampant when south Britain was one vast forest and a thorn fence formed the fortification of every village. The pagan festival of the White Sun possibly developed into the "Whitsun Ales."—Westminster Gazette.

The King's Page of Honor.

The post of page of honor to the sovereign does not carry with it, as it used to do, the right to a commission in the guards without examination of any kind, but it is still a coveted office, with privileges attached to it which are much appreciated by the sprigs of noble houses who are lucky enough to receive the appointment. It is not, for example, an unpleasant experience for a fourth form boy at Eton or Harrow to be summoned up to London on a "whole school day" for a court at Buckingham palace or other state pageant while his schoolfellows are toiling at their books. Such summonses are, of course, of the nature of royal commands, which must be obeyed.—London Modern Society.

Persian Tears.

The Persians still believe that human tears are a remedy for certain chronic diseases. At every funeral the bottling of mourners' tears is one of the chief features of the ceremonies. Each of the mourners is presented with a sponge with which to mop off his face and eyes, and after the burial they are presented to the priest, who squeezes the tears into bottles, which he keeps. This custom is one of the oldest known in the east and has probably been practiced by the Persians for thousands of years. Mention is made of it in the Old Testament.

Beautiful Pearls.

The pearls found on the gulf coast of Lower California are said to exhibit a greater variety of colors than those of any other part of the world, and the business of pearl fishing there is growing. The chief colors are black, gray, red, bluish green and yellowish. The red pearls rank among the most valuable. They possess a fine luster, and many of them are large and of the most perfect shape. They are, however, found only occasionally.

The Real Test.

Even the man who says he doesn't care a rap what other people think hesitates about carrying a pair of his wife's shoes to the cobbler to have them tapped without doing them up inside a piece of wrapping paper.—Somerville Journal.

Modern Fire Worship in Scotland.

Burghhead, in Morayshire, is unique in one respect. It has "the burning of the clavie." This ceremony is gone through every New Year's eve, old style. It is supposed to be a relic of fire worship. There is now only one other community, it is said, in Britain where the practice is carried on. The clavie consists of half an archangel tar barrel fixed on the top of a fir prop about four feet long. The second half of the tar barrel is broken up, put inside and mixed with tar. A stone must be used to knock in the nail which connects the pole and the barrel. The broken bits in the barrel are then fought by means of burning peat, no such thing as a lucifer match being allowed.

In the dark winter night the blazing thing is borne up one street and down another at high speed, then carried to the Doerie hill in the middle of the village. Here the pole is fixed on a short, strong column, and the clavie burns out. The women rush in and, picking bits of the now dying clavie to "keep the witches away," disappear into the darkness.—Glasgow Herald.

Are You Tired, Nervous and Sleepless?

Nervousness and sleeplessness are usually due to the fact that the nerves are not fed on properly nourishing blood; they are starved nerves. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery makes pure, rich blood, and thereby the nerves are properly nourished and all the organs of the body are run as smoothly as machinery which runs in oil. In this way you feel clean, strong and strenuous—you are toned up and invigorated, and you are good for a whole lot of physical or mental work. Best of all, the strength and increase in vitality and health are lasting. The trouble with most tonics and medicines which have a large, booming sale for a short time is that they are largely composed of alcohol holding the drugs in solution. This alcohol shrinks up the red blood corpuscles, and in the long run greatly injures the system. One may feel exhilarated and better for the time being, yet in the end weakened and with vitality decreased. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery contains no alcohol. Every bottle of it bears upon its wrapper The Badge of Honesty, in a full list of all its several ingredients. For the druggist to offer you something he claims is "just as good" is to insult your intelligence. Every ingredient used in this remedy is the world-famed "Golden Medical Discovery" has the unanimous approval and endorsement of the leading medical authorities of all the several schools of practice. No other medicine sold through druggists for like purposes has any such endorsement. The "Golden Medical Discovery" not only produces all the good effects to be obtained from the use of Golden Seal root, in all stomach, liver and bowel troubles, as in dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation, ulceration of stomach and bowels and kindred ailments, but the Golden Seal root used in its curative action is greatly enhanced in its curative action by other ingredients such as Stone root, Black Cherry bark, Bloodroot, Mandrake root and chemically pure triple-refined glycerine. "The Common Sense Medical Adviser," is sent free in paper covers on receipt of 21 cent stamps to pay the cost of mailing only. For 31 stamps the cloth-bound volume will be sent. Address Dr. R. V. 300 Lives Lost.

The Italian steamship Sirio, from Genoa for South America, with 800 passengers on board, was wrecked Saturday night off Hormigas Island, which lies about two and a half miles to the eastward of Cape Palos, Spain. Three hundred of the emigrants, most of them Italians and Spaniards, were drowned. The Archbishop of Sao Pedro, Brazil, was also lost. The remainder of the passengers and the officers and crew of the Sirio got away in the ship's boats or were rescued by means of ropes thrown to them from the shore. A number of fishermen who made attempts at rescue were drowned. Those rescued from the vessel are now at Cape Palos in a pitiable condition, without food or clothing.
